

The Government is Trying to Tackle the Growing Retirement Crisis—But Small Businesses Want Options.

As state-sponsored retirement plans become more widespread, federal plans, like multiple employer plans (MEPs), have come front and center. But, small businesses want a private option for retirement savings, not a one-size-fits-all approach.

If the government were to require that people save for retirement:

14% of employers would prefer federal government.

15% of employers would prefer state government.

71% of employers would prefer a private sector financial firm.

Millennium Trust provides employers with low-cost alternatives to 401(k)s and government-run plans, giving small businesses the power to choose.
